Covent-Garden Theatre, March 4, 1775.

NOTICE having been ſent THIS MORNING, that Mr. BARRY was ſuddenly attacked with a ſevere Fit of the Gout, and his Arm ſo much ſwelled as to render it impoſſible for him to put on any Dreſs, Mr. HULL (whoſe Superintendance of the Rehearſals makes him acquainted with the Buſineſs of the Play) has undertaken, AT A FEW HOURS NOTICE, to get through Mr. BARRY's Character of Artabaſus, in the beſt Manner he is able; and Mr. BOOTH, under the ſame difficult Circumſtances, has made himſelf as well acquainted as poſſible in Mr. HULL's Character of Teramenes.

This ſudden and unavoidable Exigence, will, it is hoped, plead for theſe Changes, and the INDULGENCE of the Audience is humbly requeſted to the TWO PERFORMERS who have endeavcured to repair the Deficiency.
